Industry transformation and increasing external demands

European industry is undergoing extensive change. Increased automation, digitalisation, and the integration of production and services are creating new challenges for both industrial sites and contractor companies. At the same time, requirements for permits, certificates and authorisations to carry out work tasks are becoming ever more demanding. To meet these requirements and remain competitive, innovative solutions are needed.

The challenge: skills shortages

As demands for safety, sustainability and digitalisation increase, it is becoming increasingly difficult to ensure that the right competence is in place at the right time. A lack of clear oversight of employees' and contractors' authorisations can lead to serious consequences: increased safety risks, production stoppages and regulatory breaches.

Together with industry, we have developed SSG Skillnation – a digital platform that brings together, verifies and manages competencies, certificates and authorisations in one place. When competence is traceable, up to date and accessible, risks are reduced and administration is simplified.

New digital opportunities for training providers

The platform is growing rapidly, with an increase of around 1,250 new users per week. The aim is to become a central, global player in industrial skills supply, and together with as many capable partners as possible we want to amplify the shared value.

When you submit information to the platform about an individual's newly acquired competence, you not only help reduce a major administrative burden – you also make it easy for industry to find information about your company and, if needed, contact you with any questions.

Benefits for training providers

By becoming part of SSG Skillnation, you become an active part of the solution to industry's competence challenges. Being part of the platform helps the industry to:

- 1. Increase your visibility: Through your unique marketplace page (see example above), you can share information about your offering and services directly with industry. This makes it easy for interested parties to find information about your courses and, when needed, get in touch with any questions or queries.
- 2. Straightforward management of competencies and certificates: When you upload information about an individual's completed training (including validity periods), you make it easy for industry to track when competencies expire, increasing the likelihood of efficient renewal of expiring training.
- 3. Fast and easy access: When industry identifies that a competence needs renewing, it is important that this happens quickly and smoothly. Being able to easily find training providers and contact details reduces the risk of work being delayed because required competence is missing.

- 4. Reduced administration: Paper-based certificates create a significant administrative burden, particularly when they are lost and need to be replaced quickly. By storing certificates digitally, handling, verification and access are all simplified, while issues with lost or worn certificates are reduced.
- 5. A good environmental choice: Having to issue "plastic cards" is not a sustainable step in the right direction, so moving to digital competence credentials via SSG Skillnation is also an environmental choice that can be highlighted as a positive benefit.
- 6. Easily accessible support: SSG handles a large volume of calls every day from sites and contractors. We have extensive experience, as well as well-established routines and systems, to meet the industry's requirements. When you are part of SSG Skillnation, you can benefit from this too, and you can refer both administrators and course participants directly to us.
